La Follette Announces He Will Make Speech "With Teeth in It" Soon.

President Wilson's alleged influence on the Interstate Commerce Commission in getting that body to reverse its own decision on the 5 per cent freight rate increase will be denounced on the floor of the Senate by Senator La Follette of the next few days. La Follette admitted today that his speech would be "far from an essay," and asserted that it would "have teeth" in it.

YEAGER, TURFMAN, MARRIES SECRETLY

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Jan. 19.—Joseph Yeager, only son of the late Joseph Yeager, and later known as one of the heaviest plunders on the American turf, it became known today, was married here last Saturday to Irene Roman, daughter of the late Joseph Roman, a well-known turfman.

Yeager, since interest in racing in New York decreased after the passage of the anti-betting legislation, has spent most of his time at French Lick and Hot Springs. On the marriage application, both he and his bride gave the address as French Lick, Ind.

Yeager's turf history is one of the most sensational of any bookmaker known to the public. He was a ribbon runner in Cincinnati, as it was not exciting enough for his sporting habits and game. He soon attached himself to the track of "Joe" Ullman, then one of the best known plunders. Under Ullman's advice and coaching, Yeager kept making small bets and constantly winning.

At Christmas time in 1902 he went to New Orleans track with $500, which he had saved through his small winnings. He bet $500 on a 10-to-1 shot, on a horse named Heliana, which galloped home a winner. Yeager took his $5,000 to California, and before 1903 he was half a million richer. He had made $150,000 as a bookmaker.

Yeager is now reputed to be worth three-quarters of a million dollars. His wealth first came into public prominence in Buffalo in 1908, when his first wife, Mae Yeager, also an actress, sued him for non-support. She also lost the court that when they were first married he bought her a $100,000 automobile and a $5,000 fur coat.

Yeager was divorced by her in 1911, on the ground of adultery.

Naming of Baby Sayre Is Momentous Topic At 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue

Question of Whether White House Infant Is To Be Called After Illustrious Grandparent Probably
Will Be Decided by Mother.

Never before was there such uncertainty about a baby's name, as that which exists regarding the naming of Baby Sayre. Of course, the final decision is going to rest with the mother, for even though the grandfather may be President, he may not usurp the prerogative of the mother. But how is one to speculate when the mother herself is undecided?

MAY BE FRANCIS BOWES SAYRE, JR.

Says the President, with an air of resignation, it is but meet and proper that Baby should be named after his father. The baby was named after Francis Bowes Sayre, Jr., says the father, whose opinion at times like these never counts for too much, it is fitting that the baby should be named after his illustrious grandparent, and thus be known as Woodrow Wilson Sayre. The mother is still undecided. Perhaps a compromise will result in the selection of Francis Woodrow Sayre. President Wilson fairly beamed today when questioned about the good behavior record. While it is not permitted to quote him on anything informal, it may nevertheless be stated that the

COTTON GOODS SHOW AND SALE AT KANN'S

Practically Every Type and
Class of Fabric and Made-
Up Patterns on Exhibit.

A cotton goods show, comprising a display of practically every type and class of cotton goods made in the United States today, and showing not only the fabric but made-up patterns on live and attractive models, is being held at the department store of S. Kann, Sons & Co., at Eighth street and Market space.

The show was opened yesterday morning and will continue throughout the present week. It is being conducted by the Washington store in co-operation with the Pacific Mills, probably the largest cotton goods manufacturers of the country, in furtherance of the movement for more extended use of cotton goods in the United States as a second step to the "buy-ahale" movement launched by the National Cotton show here.

Exhibit Taken Big Space.
An entire section of the first floor of the Kann store along the Eighth street side is being devoted to the cotton show and sale. The fabrics range from light and fluffy chiffons to the new weaves or fleeces for dressing gowns and other warm garments. The colors and patterns in serpentine crepes, voiles, galones, and percales are innumerable. The made-up patterns show everything from lingerie, aprons, and rompers for the little ones, to elaborate evening gowns for matron and maid. Ten models in dresses and gowns are worn by the young women models, who are in constant procession before visitors.

Booklets for Visitors.
All visitors to the show are supplied with printed booklets containing the letter given by President Wilson endorsing the various movements to relieve the situation of the cotton growers of the South by more extended use of cotton and cotton goods at home. This booklet gives a score or more of illustrations of styles in gowns, dresses, lingerie, and clothes for the little ones.

MAY FORCE THROUGH SHIP PURCHASE BILL

Holding Back Appropriation
Measures Device That May Be Adopted in Senate.

The Senate is now in the thick of the fight over the ship purchase bill. For many days to come, the indications are that this bill will be before the upper house. Whether it will pass is a matter of doubt, though it may be forced through by the device of holding back the appropriation bills.

The measure was made the unfinished business Monday afternoon, when the District bill had been passed. Senator Burton took the floor and spoke at length against it, and will speak further today.

Thin Folks Who Would Be Fat

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More

A Physician's Advice
"It is certainly a most anything to be able to put on a few pounds and stay that way," declares every experienced thin man. Such a result is not impossible despite past failures. Thin people are victims of malnutrition. They are lacking in the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the food and turn the blood into the fatty producing elements stay in the system until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal amount of fat the nutritive process must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best starchy-grain, fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food and turns the blood into the fatty producing elements stay in the system until they pass from the body as waste.
